

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A medical image processing apparatus able to automatically superpose photographing information into image data obtained by radiography. The medical image processing 5 apparatus includes a first unit for obtaining image data representing an image recorded by radiography; a second unit for obtaining photographing information data representing photographing information to be displayed on a screen; a third unit for determining position and size on the screen in which 10 the photographing information represented by the photographing information data obtained by the second unit is to be displayed; and a fourth unit for adding the photographing information data to the image data or image attendant information which is attendant upon the image data, and 15 outputting the added data.